MR. BLAINE ARRIVES JUST PEFORE THE MEETING OPENED-THE SESSION NOT A LONG ONE AND THE SITUATION OF THE BERING SEA CASE NOT

the British government to the President's letter

For the first time since the negotiations have reached such a critical stage the entire cabinet was present at the meeting. The his attendance ever since the President's return from his recent trip to Virginia Beach and Ragged Island. It was not generally expected that he would be present today, but a few minutes after 11:30, the usual hour for meeting, a two-horse carriage drove up to the front entrance of the White House and Mr. the front entrance of the White House and Mr.
Biaine stepped out. He looked considerably better than one would have expected and showed few traces of his illness.
He entered the main door of the staircase to the second fleor. The other members of the cabinet were all in their seats around the table when the Secretary of State entered the cabinet and he received a warm welcome and congratulations on the improvement in his condition.

NO CHANGE IN THE SITUATION. The meeting was not a long one, as it lasted but little over an hour. The general opinion today seems to be that the situation has changed but little from what it was last week and prior to the receipt of the most recent communication from the British minis-ter. The President still insists on a renewal of ter. The President still insists on a renewal of the modus vivendi as a necessary part of the negotiations for submitting the question of jurisdiction to arbitration. The British government on the other hand holds to its po-sition that the preservation of the seal does make necessary the renewal of the modus. In a sense this is regarded as an evasion of the main point at issue. This is shown, it is claimed, in Sir Julian's letter, where he says: Lord Salishury again points out that the in-Lord Salisbury again points out that the in-formation in the possession of her majesty's government does not lead them to believe that

It is not improbable that out of this antinewspaper campaign may come an agreement by which the Senate will consider nominations in open session. One of the conservative set says he favors a compromise, and his proposition is favorably regarded by the liberal element. He is willing to vote for open sessions except on international matters, but when international matters are being considered there must be absolute secrecy. Lord Salisbury again points out that the information in the possession of her majesty's government does not lead them to believe that another year's suspension of sealing is necessary to prevent an undue diminution of the seal herds.

NO DIRECT REFUSAL.

Still this is not a direct refusal to agree to a modus, and until Lord Salisbury either agrees or refuses absolutely to agree it is difficult to see what step the executive will take next. If, as has been claimed in some quarters. Lord Salisbury's main object is to gain time in order that the modus, if agreed to, will be practically informative it begins to look as though he had gained his point. The Senate, in its action upon the arbitration treaty, is the place to look for news in the matter now.

FOSITION OF AMERICAN VESSELS.

It is interesting, perhaps, to note the position of the American vessels in the North Pacific now in the light of the President's statement in the last paragraph of his letter that this government "will be compelled to deal with the subject upon the same basis and to use every means in its power to protect from destruction or serious injury property and jurisdictional rights which it has long claimed and enjoyed."

What IT WAS ALL ABOUT.

In no respect, however, was the session one of importance. The public could imagine, as it did, that the Senate was engaged in discussing the weightiest international question with which it has had to deal during the lifetime of any Senator now in existence, when, as a matter of fact, the Senate was mentally perspiring as the result of an effort to find out how certain newspapers succeeded in securing such accurate reports of executive sessions as have recently been printed. A few Senators could understand how enough matter might leak out of an afternoon session to supply the papers next morning, but none of the statistic of t Baltimore Markets.

Matters Discussed at the Meeting of Senate Committee Today. Senate committee on the District of Columbia was Senator McMillan's guest at dinner yesterday evening, there was a full atttendance at the regular weekly committee meeting today. No business of any great importance was transacted. The first bill considered was Mr. Morrill's bill for the promotion of anatomical science and to prevent the desecration of graves. Senators Wolcott and Faulkner were added to subcommittee on this measure; they were instructed to frame a bill which will not be liable (as was one of its predecessors) to a presidential veto, and when it has been framed to report it Adverse report was ordered on Senator Carlisle's bill to exempt improvements to real estate from taxation. "The bill has too much Henry George in it," was the remark made by a Senator, and it was this feeling which brought about the defeat of the bill.

Madison street, Georgetown, west of Back street, and extend T street in Burlieth was ordered to favorable report.

Senator Sherman's bill to extend North Capitol street to the Soldiers' Home will not be acted upon, so the committee decided, until the general bill on the extension of streets and accounts has been dispected of the general bill on the extension of streets and avenues has been disposed of.

Boarding house keepers who have imagined that the bill, which was apparently for their protection, would become law, will experience disappointment at the adverse action of the committee on that measure. Testimony accumulated by the subcommittee showed that such laws frequently work harm to innocent parties who have inadvertently engaged accommodations in the wrong kind of boarding houser. Favorable report was ordered on the House act for the relief of holders of drawback certificates issued under the act of June 2, 1890. The House act to prevent the building of houses along certain alleys in the city goes over for another week because Mr. Kenna desires to talk to the subcommittee on the other side of question. The committee instructed Clerk Moore to notify the District Commissioners to withhold permits from all persons who may make application for authority to erect houses in the committee of the commissioners are committeed.

foliows: Gentlemen: In accordance with instruction Gentlemen: In accordance with instructions from the citizens' executive committee of Washington, having in charge the reception and entertainment of the twenty-sixth national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which is to be held in this city in September next, we transmit herewith a bill which has been prepared by the committee, with the request that you send it to the President with such recommendation as you may see fit to make in the premises, and that the President be asked to submit the matter to Congress.

The twenty-third, twenty-fourth and twentyfifth national encampments of the Grand Army of the Republic were held at Milwaukee, Bos-ton and Detroit, respectively, in the years 1889. 1890 and 1891. The expenses attending the entertainment of those who went to those encampments were provided for in the following

At Milwaukee by an appropriation made by the municipal authorities in the sum of $50,000; at Boston by an appropriation made by the state of Massachusetts of $50,000, by an appropriation of $25,000 made by the city of Boston and by contributions by the citizens of Boston of $13,000—in all $88,000; and at Detroit by an appropriation made by the municipal authorities amounting to $50,000, and by contributions of $46,000 by the citizens—in all $96,000.

Careful inquiry has been made in those cities as to the number of persons no attended the encampments, including not only the old soldiers themselves, but the members of their families and others who went with them. It in 1889 was about 150,000, at Boston in

It is of course impossible at this date to estimate otherwise than approximately the number of persons who will come to Washington in September next to attend the twenty-sixth national encampment, but from the information obtained from the officers of the Grand Army of the Republic, as well as directly from many of the posts throughout the country and from a variety of other sources the committee is of opinion that the attendance in Washingtan next September will be double that of any previous encampment tendance in Washingtan next September will be double that of any previous encampment and that it is not at all improbable that it will exceed even that estimate. At this early date quarters have been secured by 13,000 ex-soldiers and applications have been received, but quarters not yet secured, for 12,550 more. We estimate that there will be an average of two other visitors for each soldier; this indicates an attendance already assured of about 75,000.

this indicates an attendance already assured of about 75,000.

The citizens of Washington at the time the invitation was extended to the national encampment to , hold its next session here subscribed for their reception and entertainment if the invitation was accepted a guarantee fund of $49,000; $33,000 of this sum has since been acknowledged confirmed by paying the first installment called for. It is expected this subscription will be doubled.

By a resolution adopted at the last meeting of the citizens' executive committee it was provided that $25,000 of the amount so subscribed by our citizens shall be used.

The remainder of the fund subscribed by the citizens of Washington, together with such sums as may hereafter be subscribed, will be collected and so much thereof as may be necessary will be expended in addition to the amount which contrast is safed to function to the amount The remainder of the fund subscribed by the citizens of Washington, together with such sums as may hereafter be subscribed, will be collected and so much thereof as may be necessary will be expended in addition to the amount which Congress is asked to furnish from the District funds.

Mr. Edson, the chairman of the citizens' executive committee, said to a STAR reporter to day in reference to the recommendation for an appropriation from District funds;

"The citizens of Washington having invited the Grand Army here wish to entertain them as other cities have done, partly by means of an appropriation by the municipal government and partly by subscription.

"The executive committee followed the same course as that followed in other cities, and applied to the Commissioners of the District to recommend to the President and to Congress an appropriation from the District funds of day in reference to the recommendation for

And the communication from the District Commissioners submitting an appeal presented to them by the citizens' executive committee for an appropriation from the joint revenues of the District of $100,000 for the entertainment of the Grand Army encampment.

The President's message says: "The event is one of national interest, and the sttendance of surviving Union soldiers will probably be larger than at any encampment that has ever the strendance. The gathering of the surviving Union soldiers will probably be larger than at any encampment that has ever the climax of these reunions. This we realize and must act accordingly, to do all that is possible, to make it in the highest degree successful."

THE PRISONER—HE AGAIN TELLS THE STORY OF THE SHOOTING AND HOW ALL THE PARTIES STOOD IN BELATION TO EACH OTHER. After recess the consideration of the right of the defense to show that the defendant had acted in self-defense was resumed, and Judge Wilson cited cases in the 102d Mass. Reports and other authorities sustaining, as he claimed, the right of the defense show the motive or purpose of the defendant when he crossed the street to speak to him. In other words it was competent to show that he had no malicious intent when he crossed the street.

The district attorney admitted that the intent of the defendant could be shown, but not his intent before crossing the street.

The court thought that an answer to such an inquiry might throw light on the subject and for that reason he would admit the inquiry.

The defendant then stated that his sole intention in crossing the street was to speak to his wife, and that he had no thought of injuring her.

ing her.

Judge Wilson then asked: What opinion or feeling did you entertain when you fired as to danger to yourself?
The government objected to the question because it was immaterial and leading, and the court requested Judge Wilson to show how, in view of the contention that Mrs. Schneider had been killed by her brother, the belief of the defendant became material to show that he acted in seif-defense.

Judge Wilson stated that it was material, be-ATIMER & SLOAN, Auctioneers, possible, to leave her father's house and live with him. He then stoutly denied having grasped his wife by her wrist, claiming that he merely touched her on the arm. He also stoutly denied having ever threatened to shoot his wife, Col. Hamlink, Frank Hamlink or any other member of the Hamlink family.

The defense then again attempted to show by the witness that threats against defendant had been communicated to him, but the offer was overruled by the court.

The defendant was then turned over to the district attorney for cross-examination.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

The defendant having denied that anyone ever heard him say to Frank Hamlink, "You know me, Frank; you know what I'll do;" stated that he crossed the street to get his wife to live with him. The district attorney asked Did you want "a living devil" to live with yon?

The defendant—No. sir.
